

October 17, 2018

#RileyFellows in the News

John Castile (Upstate, Fall 2006) is the new executive director of the Greenville County Redevelopment Authority, which is tasked with providing affordable housing and related activities. Read more.

Richard Hagins (Upstate, Fall 2017), founder and CEO of US&S Inc., was elected to serve as the chairman of the Greenville Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. Read more.

Luanne Runge (Upstate, Spring 2017) has been named chief operating officer at Elliott Davis, a leading business solutions firm with nine offices across the Southeast. Read more.

Mindy Taylor (Midlands, Spring 2014), government and community relations manager for Duke Energy, has been appointed to serve as the chairman of the Greater Florence Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors. Read more.

Dixon Woodward (Lowcountry, Fall 2013) was promoted to state president of United Community Bank for South Carolina and Coastal Georgia. Read more.

Shaundra Young Scott (Lowcountry, Fall 2017) was featured in Charleston Business Magazine for her contributions as the executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union of South Carolina. Read more.

Join the Riley Institute, Secretary Dick Riley, and S.C. Future Minds on Oct. 30 at the WhatWorksSC celebration luncheon in Columbia to celebrate three outstanding programs supporting public education. Hear from three Riley Fellows about their recent field study of Finnish public education: Dr. Russell Booker (Upstate, Fall 2009), Rep. Neal Collins (Upstate, Fall 2015), and Susie Shannon (Midlands, Spring 2012). Learn more and register.