

April 30, 2018

#RileyFellows in the News

Shaniece Criss (Upstate, Spring 2017), faculty member at Furman University, has been elected to the Travelers Rest City Council. Read more.

Alan Ethridge (Upstate, Fall 2009), executive director of the Metropolitan Arts Council, received the prestigious Individual Elizabeth O'Neill Verner Award for Arts. Read more.

Lawrence Flynn (Midlands, Spring 2010), an attorney with Pope Flynn, LLC, received a Leadership in Law award from SC Lawyers Weekly. Read more.

Mavis Huger (Lowcountry, Fall 2017), attorney with Counts & Huger, LLC, was elected a member of the Charleston School of Law foundation's board of directors. (link not available)

Sherri Lydon (Midlands, Spring 2010), Columbia criminal defense attorney and former state and federal prosecutor, has been nominated to become South Carolina's first female U.S. attorney. Read more.

#RileyFellows Having an Impact in S.C.

Caroline Mauldin (Lowcountry, Fall 2016), executive director of S.C. Future Minds, organized a statewide campaign to recognize teachers as heroes. Read more in The Post and Courier.

Michael Boulware Moore (Lowcountry, Fall 2016) is leading the effort to build the International African American Museum on Gadsden's Wharf in Charleston, where his ancestors arrived as slaves. Read more in The New York Times.

Join us to celebrate the winners of the Upstate Diversity Leadership Awards at the 14th annual dinner on May 24 at the TD Convention Center, hosted by the Riley Institute and the Greenville Chamber of Commerce, in partnership with Upstate Chambers. Keynote speaker will be our very own Juan Johnson! Register.