

Russell Diesinger is currently a member of the professional staff at Reading High School in Reading, PA where he teaches United States Government, Economics, and Criminal Justice. He also teaches U.S. History as part of an alternative education administered by the Reading Area Community College. Before coming to Reading High School, Mr. Diesinger worked for twenty-two years in educational publishing as a consultant, sales representative, and sales manager.

Mr. Diesinger participated in the Riley Institute for Teachers of Government program in 2005. In addition, he was named a national semifinalist in the Abraham Lincoln Fellowship and a Preferred Alternate by the James Madison Memorial Fellowship in 2007. Mr. Diesinger was also chosen to Who's Who in American Teaching consecutively from 2004-2007.

In addition to his devotion to teaching, Mr. Diesinger is very involved in the community. He serves as the School Director for the Exeter Township School District (2000 to present), and was elected Vice President in 2007. He also serves on the Chairman Personnel Committee of the Joint Operating Committee at Berks Career and Technology Center, is a member of the Berks County Planning Board for Good Schools Pennsylvania, and was the Dean of Good Schools PA Berks County Summer School at Albright College during the summer of 2007.

Born in Norristown, PA, Mr. Diesinger has been a life-long resident of the state. He and his wife Jeri have four children: Laura, a special education teacher, Jake, currently serving in the military, Edward, an investment broker, and Mary, a film production assistant.